GET OUTSIDE CANADA

What happened? This country used to be made of explorers, voyagers and adventurers. We need to find the great Canadian outdoors again. We need to explore, to voyage, to venture outside. We need to make the time to throw open our doors.

Coleman is calling on the support of all Canadians – Canadian media, Canadian officials and Coleman® partners to urge the government to declare July 17th as National Get Outside Day, because who wouldn't want another day to get outside?

As a country defined by its breathtaking landscape, we are on the brink of a national crisis that challenges who we are as Canadians. With 63%* of the Canadians surveyed saying they spend two hours or less outside per week, we are well on our way to becoming a nation of insiders. As Canadians, we need to explore, to voyage, to venture outside. It seems Canadians – especially children – are spending less time outdoors, resulting in a wide range of problems. Getting outside is the prescription to all of these issues.

Getting outside can:

- Ease depression – group nature walks are linked to enhanced mental health and positivity, as well as significantly lower levels of depression and feelings of stress.<sup>1</sup>
- Improve outlook – people who walk, bike or run in nature have a lower risk of poor mental health than those who exercise indoors.<sup>2</sup>
- Improve focus – interacting with nature gives your brain a break from everyday over-stimulation, which can have a restorative effect on your attention levels.<sup>3</sup>
- Improve brain function – studies show that artificial environments do not provide the things our brain requires for novelty and excitement.<sup>4</sup>
- Help with relaxation – being in a natural environment or a green space can give us a feeling of relaxation that can combat anxiety and stress.<sup>5</sup>
- Make us happy – studies show that activities in nature make us feel happier than the same activities performed indoors.<sup>6</sup>

We know the will to change is there. 91%* of Canadians surveyed agree that spending time outdoors is part of a healthy lifestyle, and 86%* surveyed indicated that it is important to spend time outdoors. Coleman Canada believes it is time to bring national attention to this issue and is committed to becoming a catalyst for behavior change.

2X FASTER BOIL TIME OUTDOORS*

Coleman's patent pending burner technology brings unrivaled innovation to outdoor cooking. Engineered to perfection, this burner technology will revolutionize industry standards for years to come.

*versus a standard Coleman® burner at 3m/s windspeed.

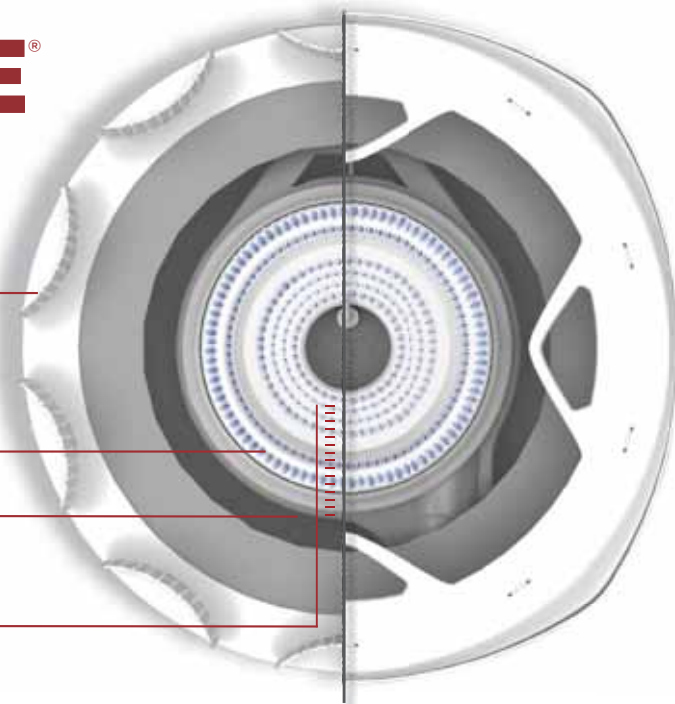

Eliminates need for side panels to fit larger pots and pans

Large burner diameter for wider heat distribution across your pan

Additional uniform flame holes produce a larger heating area

Downward stairstepping burner design reduces wind exposure
